

Amadeus Airport Pay

For travellers, paying for ancillaries at the airport can be a painful experience. After queuing for check-in and bag-drop, it is commonplace to have to walk to the far end of the airport to pay for excess luggage or a flight upgrade. This typical scenario is because shared check-in desks cannot accommodate the specific payment needs of multiple airlines and ground handlers.

To tackle this issue, Amadeus developed Amadeus Airport Pay, the first payment solution in the industry which accepts EMV chip card payments and can be used by multiple airlines and ground handlers and multiple banks.

With Amadeus Airport Pay airlines can now reach any passenger with an EMV payment solution in any airport worldwide, regardless of the check-in infrastructure, as the solution is independent from airport technology.

Travellers can pay with a contact and contactless EMV chip card or an EMV compliant mobile wallet such as Apple Pay or Android Pay. As a result, airlines can convert more ancillary sales by offering travellers a convenient and secure method that overcomes the payment hassles seen today at many airports.
